

NOTEWORTHY

Vows

Haley Gressett & Andrew Somers
November 29, 2009

There aren't many girls who get to orchestrate their own engagement. Andy Somers asked Haley Gressett to help set a romantic scene for his best friend, who was about to propose to his girlfriend. Haley enthusiastically tackled the planning, down to details like figuring out how to put the candles in just the right place at a local park, and she even bought a bottle of champagne for (she thought) the newly engaged couple. Just as Andy and Haley were about to place the finishing touches on their friends' engagement setup, Andy got down on one knee and proposed to Haley. The imaginative proposal was the perfect foreshadowing for the thoughtful reception the couple held at the Bob Bullock Museum following a beautiful candlelit ceremony. The "Taste of Texas" menu of beef tenderloin, lamb chops, sea bass, flamed sweet potatoes, lobster quesadillas, and hush puppies made from the bride's grandfather's special recipe provided ample delicious sustenance for the guests, who went on to dance to the sounds of Think Big and the Bullet Proof Brass. But for the happy couple, the best part of the night was having "all the people in our life who we care about the most under one roof to celebrate with us!"

photography by chrismoseley.com

The couple first met at a Super Bowl party and were officially dating a week later.

The bride has a quiet moment before the ceremony

The bride's cake was by the Better Batter Bakery.

Keith at Westbank
Flowers created
fall-inspired arrangements.

The couple's first dance was to Patty Griffin's "Heavenly Day."

Wedding planner extraordinaire Linda Dryden with the parents of the bride, Penny and Jim Gressett.